Sir,

Re: Pope condemns Orissa Carnage Vide TNIE 28/8/2008.

Christianity claims that those who believe and follow Jesus alone go to heaven and all others will go to Hell. Moreover they believe that those who convert more people into Christianity will have a special place in Heaven. It is said in the world encyclopedia Britannica that when all the people in the world become Christians, Jesus will come and rule the earth for 1000 years. Perhaps this made Pope John Paul II to declare during his visit to India that they will have rich harvest in Asia especially in India. Are they not provocative words which can boil the blood of people whose religion is targeted through unabated conversions by deception by seduction and through all foul means? All these have created have created insecurity in the minds of innocent Hindus to live their religion.

All living organism (including human beings) have the basic instinct to survive. The core personality of a person is a religious person. When the existence of that personality is threatened, a person becomes just a living organism and shown his reaction for survival. Who should be blamed for this? Is it not true that Christian Machineries are indulging in unabated religious conversions? One cannot target a person for conversion without denigrating his religion. Do Hindus have no right to safeguard their religious traditions? Whether the followers of Christianity will keep quite if Hindus target Christianity? How can Christians kill a Hindu religious leader without religious sanction?

Violence in whatever form is certainly not acceptable in the society. But what is the cause for it? Without eradicating the cause expecting elimination of effect is foolishness. Just look into the Jesuits Oath updated on 26/3/2000 a copy of which is enclosed herewith. It instigates its flock to indulge in violence and suggests the methodology also. Is it not the Vatican which lent support to Hitler for burning millions and millions of people of other faiths in gas chambers? Church also received enough gold for their support to Hitler. Instead of having introspection he is indulging in throwing blame on others. Therefore Pope Benedict XVI has no moral right to appeal to the Indian religious and civil authorities to restore peace. He must realize that it is the missionary zeal of conversion which is causing problem among peace loving Indians.

Thanking you,

K. Prabhakar.
